

Fund Objective

The objective of the Enhanced Income Fund is to generate returns well in excess of a typical core cash fund. This fund is best suited for investors looking for enhanced cash returns with low capital risk and low liquidity requirements.

Investment Strategy

Employs a conservative approach to enhance yields through extracting the liquidity risk premium in longer dated and less liquid debt instruments, as well as a marginal increased exposure to credit assets. Our fundamental credit review process is robust, combining qualitative and quantitative analysis, overlaid with institutional memory to question convention, operating within a strong risk and compliance framework. Our portfolio construction process builds a well-diversified fund targeting 30+ counterparties to further diversify risks

Fund Outlook

The fund continues to maintain a low duration, and a moderate maturity and liquidity position. Issue spreads in the domestic listed debt capital markets overall remain contained due to the demand for assets despite the pace of issuance. We continue to look for opportunities in both the public and private debt space. The fund is well positioned for the current interest rate outlook. We remain cautious in these times with regards to credit and liquidity risk.

Market Commentary

On the 18th of July, the South African Reserve Bank's (SARB) Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) decided to leave the repo rate unchanged at 8.25 percent. The decision to pause was not unanimous, with two of the six MPC members in favour of a 25-basis point (bps) reduction, signaling a shift towards easing as early as September 2024. Policymakers maintain that reigning in price growth is not yet achieved. Despite inflation expectations gradually waning, they do, however, remain above the central bank's midpoint target as well as the policymaker's medium-term forecasts.

According to the central bank's quarterly projection model (QPM), the inflation outlook has marginally improved since the last MPC meeting. Headline consumer price inflation (CPI) for this year is now projected to average 4.9 percent, compared to 5.1 percent at the previous MPC meeting. Over the next few quarters, headline inflation is further anticipated to dip below 4.5 percent, while stabilising at midpoint over the medium term. The improved outlook comes on the back of falling food, fuel and energy prices.

In the first half of 2024, cumulative load shedding, measured in terms of Gigawatts per hour (GWh), fell by 72 percent compared to the first half of 2023. This improvement in the availability of electricity, if sustained, is expected to bode well for future administered price inflation. Moreover, fuel prices have in recent months maintained a downward trend, despite the ongoing conflict in the Middle East. The tepid demand for oil is mainly driven by a slowing macroeconomic backdrop across both emerging and developed market regions.

Similarly, global labour markets continue to capitulate to this benign macroeconomic setting, thereby muting risks associated with future demand-pull inflation. To this end, total employment in South Africa decreased by 67 000 quarter-on-quarter, from 10 731 000 in December 2023 to 10 664 000 in March 2024. Layoffs were mainly pronounced across the trade, business services, and mining sector. As a result, gross earnings paid to employees fell by R35.1 b from R993 b in December 2023 to R957.9 b in March 2024.

Since the start of the year, four central banks overseeing the 10 most heavily traded currencies have reduced their policy rates. The divergence in monetary policy is also prevalent among emerging market economies, with Latin American countries reducing their policy rates as inflation continues to fall in line with receding macroeconomic activity. On a conspectus of the above, the domestic interest rate market is now pricing in two rate cuts in 2024, with the probability of additional interest rate cuts gradually rising over the medium term.
